We welcome those passionate about Public-Private Partnerships good practice to join our community of APMG-accredited training organizations (ATOs). Achieving APMG accreditation enables you to provide training courses for the APMG Public-Private Partnerships Certification Program - thus playing an essential role in improving the quality of PPPs worldwide.

Accreditation of Trainers

APMG assesses training organizations, their trainers and course material to ensure their services are being delivered to a high standard.

Our training organization accreditation process is made up of three separate assessments:

- Assessment of the organization's management systems and processes for administering and delivering training courses and exams.
- Review of course materials used to prepare candidates for certification (these can be traditional tutor-led classroom materials or online/distance learning and blended solutions).
- Certification of trainers to be used by the organization for the delivery of training courses.

These processes are developed and managed in accordance with a robust quality management system accredited by the United Kingdom Accreditation Service (UKAS).

Becoming a Trainer

All trainers must be sponsored by an Accredited Training Organization (ATO) and must meet the following criteria:

- Two years of training delivery experience
- Five years of experience in PPPs

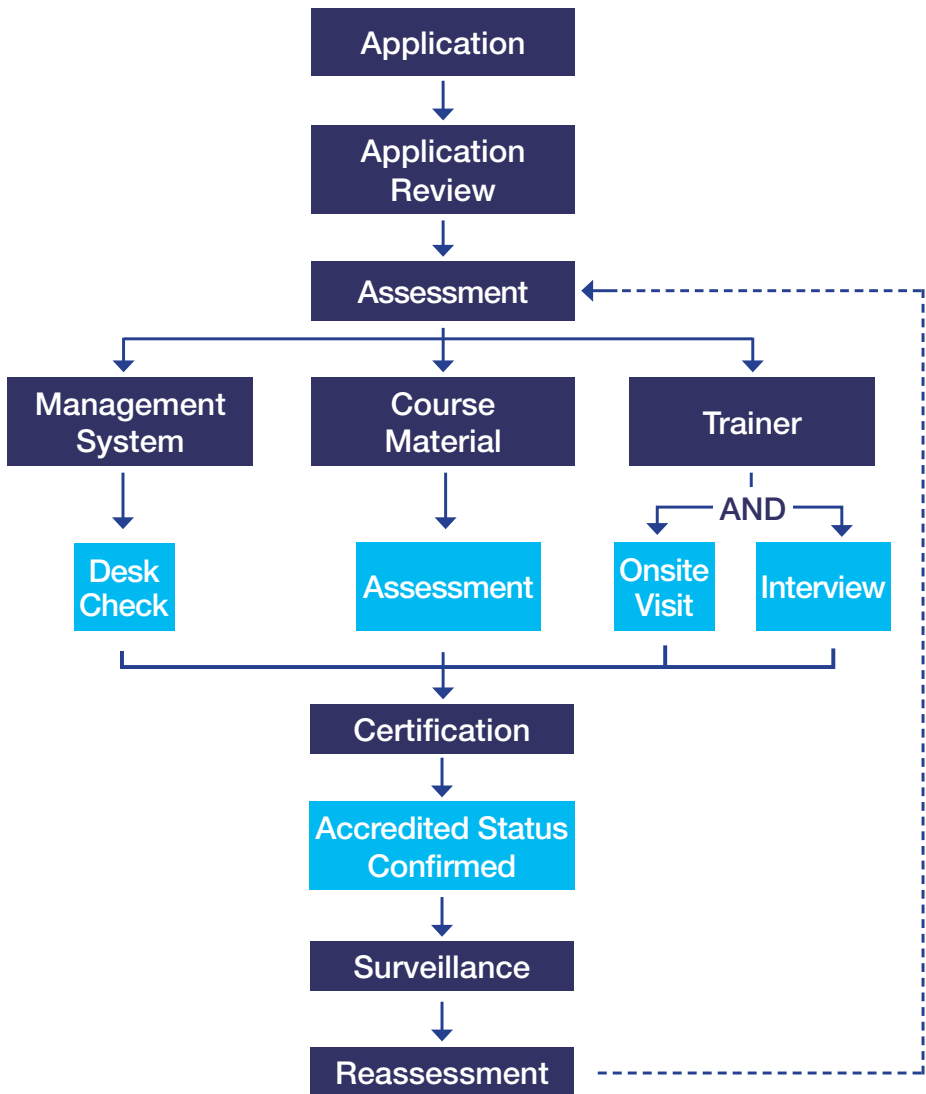

Trainers who also work for Multilateral Development Banks (MDBs) or PPP units require sponsorship by an Accredited Training Organization (ATO).

APMG will manage the process of matching trainers with ATOs.
